The setting you're after isn't buried in a team roster. It's tied to your settings preset, which is easy to overlook when you're getting started in MLB The Show 26. On PS5, highlight the current preset in User Settings and press Square to open its management options. Whether you're adjusting controls or checking out MLB 26 stubs, getting your profile set up first gives you one less thing to sort out later. Look for the preset name near the top of the screen; yours might say Casual.

Put your club first

Picking a favorite team is a small change, but it's one you'll notice when the menus and default selections reflect the club you actually follow. Maybe you're sticking with the Cardinals. Maybe Arizona's your team, regardless of how the season goes. You don't need to start a new game mode to make that choice. The setting belongs to your personal preferences, so the place to begin is the main menu rather than a roster screen or an individual matchup.

Find the right settings menu

From the main menu, head toward the upper-right corner and find the settings icon, usually shown as a gear. Open it, then choose User Settings. There are several settings categories here, so don't stop at the first screen and assume you've missed the team option. Once you're inside User Settings, move your attention to the preset displayed at the top. That's the route into the profile options described earlier, rather than another control or camera adjustment.

Choose the team you want

With the preset management window open, select Set Favorite Team. You'll get a list of the available Major League Baseball clubs, so scroll until you reach yours and select it. Take a second to check the name before confirming. It's a quick step, but there's no reason to rush past the choice you came here to change. Confirm your selection and apply the changes before leaving the menu. Simply highlighting a club isn't the same as finishing the process.

Finish your profile setup

Once you've applied the change, return to the main menu and check that your preferred club is selected where expected. If you're also planning to buy cheap MLB 26 stubs, keep that separate from this adjustment: choosing a favorite team is a settings task, not a purchase step. The useful thing to remember is the route through User Settings and your active preset. Next time you want a different club, you'll know where to go without searching through unrelated menus.
